REMOVE CHILDREN URGED IN REPORT

11 In Feeble Minded Insti- tute To Be Given Showing

By Robert D. Anderson.
Frankfort, Ky., March 13.—The report of the Huntsman probe committee, submitted today, urges the State Board of Charities and Corrections to "give immediate attention" to the cases of the eleven children whose removal from the Feeble-Minded Institute was recommended by Dr. H. H. Goddard, expert from Columbus, O. The report exonerates the Kentucky Children's Home Society and Judge Harry W. Robinson, of Louisville, from any blame in connection with the commitment of children to the institute. It also exonerates the management of the institute in connection with the objectionable conditions found there.

The report says, in part:
"The institution does not reflect credit on the great commonwealth of Kentucky. It does not in any sense appertain to the people of this state. It is a disgrace to the state and a blot upon the name of the commonwealth. We repeat and insist, however, that this situation is due mainly to the lack of funds for the proper administration of the care and attention rightfully due to a most unfortunate class of our own people."

Change Anticipated.

"The institution has passed now into the hands of a management which we understand will undertake a departure from old methods and ways. This committee wishes the new management 'goodspeed' in their efforts and expresses the hope that only good will result, but with that hope the committee expresses the doubt that ultimate success will result unless the authority be armed with proper means to carry out the great work with which they are confronted."

"It appears from Dr. Goddard's report that there are eleven children in the class of twenty-five which he examined, three of which class were transferred from the Kentucky Children's Home and eight of whom came there directly from various counties. These eleven are denominated, as being 'just across the border line.' Looking to their welfare, it is suggested to the Board of Control that every effort should be made by the board that some arrangement be immediately made looking toward the betterment of their conditions and prospects.

Will Furnish Names.
"The committee, or chairman thereof, will furnish at a convenient time a list of these eleven unfortunate children together with information as to places from whence they came originally. The committee feels that since it appears that there is yet hope for them the Board of Control should give their cases immediate attention."
"The committee expresses the opinion and the sincerest hope, that there may be ultimately, and perhaps immediately, much good as a result of its investigations. It has brought to the forefront a condition that was not generally known to exist, and has developed a need for some sort of institution, or place in existing institutions for the care and treatment of a most pitiable class of unfortunates. Since this is true, the investigation instigated by our chairman, R. O. Huntsman, should be commended."

Take Herbine for indigestion. It relieves the pain in a few minutes and forces the fermented matter which causes the misery into the bowels where it is expelled. Price 60c. Sold by Ohio County Drug Co.

HEFLIN

The one's who have had the flu in this vicinity, are getting along nicely.

Mr. Paul Russell, who has been attending school at Kansas City, Mo., has returned to his home, near Hefflin.

Miss Ethel Richeson, of this place, visited her mother, Mrs. Bettie Richeson, of Buford, last week.

Mrs. Mary Riggs visited Mr. and Mrs. Dave Havener, Monday.

Mrs. S. L. Whittaker, who has been sick for the last few months, died at her home Thursday morning. The remains were buried at Woodward's Valley Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Mr. Gooble and Willie Thomasson went to Owensboro Tuesday, of last week, with a load of tobacco.

Mrs. Ada Riggs and children visited at Mr. and Mrs. Hipsley Riggs', Tuesday.

Mrs. Mable Ross and little daughter, Ruth, of near South Carrollton, spent last week-end with Mrs. Ross' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Easterday, of this place.

Mrs. Pat Foster spent a few days with her son, Mr. Jess Foster, last week.

SLAYER AVERS HE KILLED IN SLEEP

Michigan Man Remembers Nothing Regarding Wife's Death

Pontiac, Mich. March 13.—"My wife kissed me and went to sleep on my arm. The next thing I remember I was walking on the railroad tracks and knew that I had killed her."

This is the amazing statement made to the police by C. L. Garmon, 23, who is in jail here charged with the murder of his wife, who was found slain in bed in her home in Pontiac. The circumstances surrounding the crime are the most curious that have confronted the authorities here in years.

Garmon, who told the officers that he worshipped his wife, asserted that he suffered a loss of memory during which time he could remember nothing that took place.

He regained his memory, he said, and found himself fully dressed walking from his home down the railroad tracks toward the city. He gave himself up to the first policeman he met, and at his request both returned to the home, where they found the body of the murdered woman, her head crushed and a blood-stained axe standing beside the bed. Indications were that the woman had given no struggle.

"I loved my wife," Garmon told the officers. "She was a good woman, very considerate and dutiful. We had no trouble. She was previously married and had a hard time and I tried to make up to her for her unhappiness. We did not quarrel."

Great beads of perspiration poured down Garmon's face as he told his story. He appeared to be under a great strain. As a result of a train wreck two years ago one arm, part of a foot were lost and he has since been forced to wear a silver plate in his skull to cover a fracture. He told the officers that of late his head bothered him a great deal and he did not sleep well at night.

Danced in Evening.

The couple spent the afternoon before the murder shopping and in the evening attended a dance.

"We had a good time," Garmon said, "and after we returned home we spent some time making plans for the summer. My wife kissed me and went to sleep on my arm. The next thing I remember I was walking on the railroad tracks and knew that I had killed her."

Coroner Farmer took charge of the body and decided to hold no inquest. C. H. Wooten, an uncle of Mrs. Garmon, lived in the same house with them. She had no parents, but a son by her former marriage survives.

According to Garmon the couple were married four months ago. He came here to work for the Dupont Engineering Company. He is being held pending a decision as to whether to call a sanity commission.

PREDICTS FLASHING OF PICTURES TO MARS

Cincinnati, March 13.—That pictures as well as words may be flashed to other planets is the hope expressed by Miss Annette Covington, Cincinnati artist, direct descendant of Robert Fulton, builder of the first steamboat.

Puzzled over the theory that actual signals are possible, Miss Covington believes that communication with other worlds will come if a long and short flash has been observed.

"In time, we might even show the Martians a picture of an earth city," said Miss Covington.

"Of course I am still skeptical about being able to get the first communication, but, once that is accomplished, the rest should be less difficult."

Miss Covington is a granddaughter of the late Samuel Fulton Chase, who was first president of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce.

KILLING OF ELEPHANT HERD. NOVEL EXPERIMENT

London, March 13.—Major Pretorius, the officer who was appointed by the government to exterminate the herd of elephants inhabiting the Addo Forest, near Port Elizabeth, South Africa, is having a novel experiment, says a Central News Johannesburg message.

He reports that after killing a large number of the animals he is being hunted by the remainder.

The elephants have evidently realized that he is their natural enemy, and instead of him doing the talking, the boot is on the other leg.

Major Pretorius adds that the animals display extraordinary cunning, lying in wait for his approach as if they had made a preconcerted plan, and he has already had some miraculous escapes.

WOMAN EVANGELIST'S MORAL—WISDOM SHOTS

Spokane, Wash., March 13.—Here are a few pearls of wisdom and a couple slugs of vinegar tonic for the corals handed out by a woman evangelist here. She says:

"Girls, don't look like beefsteaks. There's more paint in Spokane than in hell."

"Don't use so much perfume a man is gassed into submission."

"If you can't see the harm in dancing you are blind."

Some parents think it is best to teach their children to dance and play cards at home so they won't have to learn these vices elsewhere. Might teach 'em to smoke, swear and steal for the same reason."

BEARS DESCEND ON NEW JERSEY VILLAGES

Pearl River, N. Y., March 12.—Leo Hesse, the village butcher, saw bear tracks in the snow on the outskirts of Montvale, N. J., just across the state line. Hesse followed the tracks to the home of Edward Serrel and there telephoned to everybody about the country to be on the lookout for bears.

Mr. Hesse himself saw the bears, two of them, after he left the Serrel home, but they were half a mile away and he did not consider it necessary to try to catch up with them. Half a dozen men armed with rifles traced the bears to the home of Mrs. Laura Hollis in Pearl River. Mrs. Hollis said she had seen them, but thought they were stray dogs and drove them away. It was reported the animals had killed several calves near Alledale, N. J.

MASONIC SOLILOQUY.

John William Tinsley.
With my life in utter darkness
As I knelt upon my knee,
And prayed to heaven for guidance
On my mystic march to be;
And finding favor in the craft
That placed their trust in me,
I embarked upon the mystic flight of
The Square, Compass and G.

Tho a stranger to the mystic art
In God I placed my trust,
To free my life from earthly cares
And purify my lusts:
To pilot me on the voyage
O'er waves of unknown sea,
As I drifted on the journey of
The Square, Compass and G.

With the Master as my pilot,
And the helm within his hand,
I had no fear of danger
While in that unknown land;
But traveled on with feeble steps
And wistful eyes to see,
Into the mystic symbols of
The Square, Compass and G.

With steps of feeble character
I traveled on and on,
Hoping to find an entrance
To reach my Master's throne,
And there to gain the mystery
Of my future life to be,
And learn to use the working tools—
The Square, Compass and G.

Now I have the secret of
The great mysterious art,
A Mason, yes, a Master!
Deep down within the heart;
The darkness turned to knowledge
That filled my soul with glees,
To comprehend the mystery of
The Square, Compass and G.

On the Plumb of life I'm working
With the Gavel in my hand,
To Square life's rude disfigurements
On my journey thru this land;
With the Level even balanced
O'er life's unrelenting sea:
I have no fear of wreckage on
The Square, Compass and G.

When the death-knell dooms the verdict
Of my soul's eternal flight,
And my vision blinds are lowering
Into scenes of endless light;
When the shadows of death are gathering
Sing "Nearer My God To Thee,"
And carve upon my headstone
The Square, Compass and G.

WAX-MAKING HARD WORK FOR THE BEES

Naturalists tell us that when a swarm of bees needs wax to build new combs a delegation of workers gorge themselves and cling together in a dense mass, suspended from some point overhead. Within 24 hours wax begins to ooze from the wax-plates on their abdomens, being secreted by glands near the plates. These plates, on the under surface of the abdomen, can be viewed readily with the aid of a microscope, even one of low power.

Making wax is harder work for the bees than making honey; to produce a single pound of wax 21 pounds of honey is consumed. In order to obtain the maximum amount of honey, many up-to-date bee-keepers use a machine to extract the honey from the comb and then put the latter back in the hive to be refilled repeatedly, thus not only conserving honey but making more of the bees' time available for gathering and storing new stocks of the sweet liquid.

The wax as it exudes from the plates on a worker's abdomen is thin and fluid but it soon hardens in contact with the air, forming a coating on the outer surface of the plate, which gradually thickens as fresh wax is secreted. When a comparatively large mass of wax has accumulated the bee begins scraping it off with its hind legs which are fitted with sharp hairs or spines, known as pollen-combs. Often other bees assist in removing the wax, stabbing their spine-armed legs into it and pulling it loose.

As the wax is torn off in the form of scales it is passed forward to the mandibles of the insects and with some assistance from the fore legs worked into a smooth soft mass which is finally used to build up six-sided cells of comb for honey, for eggs or for bee-bread.
